THE RADDY'S LAMENT.

BY CONNY O'RYAN.

The autumn winds now cheerless sweep, a weird requiem screams,
Around our homes, where oft in sleep, we've had our sweetest dreams.
No more bright hopes of plunder stalk before our longing eyes,
A doleful sound of vanquished, whip'd, our list'ning ears surprise.
We see our hopes—our party's name—now trembling on the brink
Of a base career of frauds and crimes, we shudder when we think
That those whom once our very nod would cause to leave our way,
Can shout with triumph in our ears, the Rads have had their day.

It's only one short year ago, that laurels crown'd our brow,
The hero (?) then, of Snickersville, was master of the scow.
But now destruction's at the helm, we're drifting on the shoals,
An awful gale has struck our prow, which makes us "hunt our holes."
The sceptre we have wielded with unrelenting sway,
Is smiting us like miscreants, from Maine to Iowa.
The colored gang has bravely fought against the turbid wave,
But alas our craft's untimely wreck'd, the nigger crew to save.

We are drifting, swiftly drifting, to a fate that's right and meet,
A just retaliation for our actions indiscreet.
E'en now we feel the wretchedness of our unhappy fate;
To weep and pray is all in vain; repentence comes too late.
Farewell, the fattest offices; here ends our shoddy dream;
All party hopes were blasted through the equalization scheme.
If punishment commensurate with our frauds they should demand,
Then half our leaders, sure, would swing from off the hangman's stand.

We are not passing from the field with a gradual decay—
Not with'ring like a wreath of flowers beneath the sun's bright ray—
An overdose of Sambo is the cause of all our ills,
The party has been purged to death with Thaddy Steven's pills.
Come weep with me, you Radicals, who dirty work have done;
Let's pause in our careers before the day of grace is gone.
A beacon's brightly burning now to warn us from the way
That wrecked our craft which erst could strike its millions in dismay.

A TALE OF SAVAGE LIFE.

BY JOHN QUILL.

This is a thrilling narrative of a noble North American Indian.

It is also the simple story of a woman's love

And it is a touching illustration of the power of paternal affection.

As well as a tale of bitter and terrible revenge.

It is also first-class in every respect, and warranted to keep one year in any climate, and it is a number of other things, which I won't mention, because I don't want to tell the anecdote before I get to it. For I once knew a man who undertook to write a preface to his book, and when he got through he couldn't tell whether to make a book of the preface, or a preface of the book, and he lost his reason, and became a straw haired lunatic trying to decide.

Out in the prairie dwelt an Indian chief named Fiery Nose, and Fiery Nose had a daughter, over whose head sixteen Indian summers might have passed.

Now it will be necessary, you perceive, that this copper complected young maiden should have a lover, in order to give this story the proper degree of interest. So she had one, and his name was Buffalo Bull, and he was an aged brave, some years her senior, and he wore knock knees and goggles, and was related to a red-haired tribe of Indians who ate the bread of idleness, excepting when they were compelled to work for a living. Buffalo Bull was a fine old brave, and he always hit directly from the shoulder, and considered it no disgrace to drink nine fingers of fire-water at one time, and wear crape on his hat when his first wife died.

He also had a cow-lick in his hair.

The old aborigine Fiery nose, hadn't the slightest idea in the world that such a venerable old savage as B. B., sprung in the knees and spavined as he was, ever thought to marry his daughter. But, strange to say, that was the very identical thing upon which Buffalo had set his heart.

So he called one evening at the family mansion of Fiery Nose, with the intention of murdering him in a peaceable and friendly manner, and then eloping with his daughter, the Fair Prairie Flower.

On that very night Fiery Nose sat in his library with his war paint on, trying to balance his scalp account, which was one scalp short, and the Prairie Flower also wore paint, and sat reading Tupper's inspiring poems under the chandelier in the front parlor.

When Buffalo Bull came in, he went back into the library, and entered into conversation with the old man, for he had rare conversational powers, and spoke his native tongue with a facility that was at once admirable and remarkable.

"Will you take a pipe?" asked the hospitable Fiery Nose; "do, take one," handing him a coil of gas-pipe. "I have some tobacco that has a stamp on it, and it consequently must be good. It was grown in Paducha."

"Why don't you use the 'Mud Turtle' brand?" observed Buffalo Bull. "Every paper you buy has a million dollar bill in it, and you can get it for five cents. It is an excellent investment for your surplus earnings. Let me advise you to get some."

"Ah, I wil'," said Fiery Nose. "Prayhaire," said he to his child, "go around and buy me two papers of Mud Turtle tobacco. You'd better ride. Get a quarter's worth of tickets, and you may buy 'yellow jack' with the change."

The fair Prairie Flower kissed her aged parent until his colors began to run, and then she went out on her errand with a small hat over her eyes.

"Nice girl, ain't she?" said Fiery Nose; "I've had a great deal of trouble bringing her up, but I am amply repaid, and I attribute all to the fact that I raised her with yeast powders. I got the best, and they did the business."

"She is a fine girl, and no mistake, and she seems good, too. By the way, how are you getting along over at your Sunday School?"

"Tolerably, thank you," said Fiery Nose; "tolerably. I make them an address, and play a few tunes on the melodeon every Sabbath afternoon; but I can't attend to it properly, you know."

"No? Why not?"

"Well, you see, I am constantly interrupted. Here last Sunday, while I was right in the midst of a touching hymn, a pale face came down the road, and I was obliged to go out and murder him. He ran, but I told him that he'd got to die, and if he didn't want to go out on the fly, he'd better succumb at once."

"Did he?"

"Yes, he came up and apologized for running on the ground that he wanted to see a man. But I was mad, for you know I am lymphatic, with a tendency to apoplexy, and I don't like to run."

"Right enough, too."

"So I gripped onto this fellow like a double-headed terrier, and then I scalped him and let him go. He asked me what I thought he ought to do, and I told him I would advise him as a friend to use hair restoratives warranted not a dye, and to shake the bottle, and rub it well in."

"It did credit to your head and heart," observed Buffalo Bull.

"He said so, and concluded by giving me his hand, and asking me if I wouldn't bury the hatchet."

"Did you signify your willingness to do so?"

"I did, and the ceremony came off at the cemetery. The friends and relatives of the family were invited, and the Episcopal service was read at the grave. No cards, however."

"What, no seven up in the carriages going to the funeral? Why, I thought that was the regular thing."

"Oh, yes; we had that, of course.—But I mean no cards of invitation."

"By the way, old boy," ejaculated Buffalo Bull, "speaking of your daughter, she's a regular straight-out gamboge-skinned, aboriginal angel, with no discount on her. She's a nobby bit of calico; and, while I think of it, I understand young Grizzly Bear, the festive brave of the Algonquins, has viewed her with a critic's eye and passed her imperfections by, and concluded to go for her. How sayest thou?"

"He has, has he? Well, permit me to remark that he has probably shinned up the incorrect tree. Him? why I'd just as leave marry her to somo wooden-headed cigar store Indian, I would, upon my sacred word of honor as a gentlemen."

"She's too good for him, peradventure," observed Buffalo Bull sententiously.

"Venture your whole pile on that, me boy. She wears low-down bonnets, and has her linen embroidered, she does; besides she chews gum, and has a four-ounce ring through her nose. No girl like that's agoing to fling herself away, is she? Well, I should think not. Not while her pa can dabble his hands in gore, at any-rate, I reckon."

"But, my friend," observed Bull, with a trembling voice, "how much these ebullitions of youthful affection remind me of me childhood days. Look at me while I weep; listen to these bona fide tears as they patter in the spittoon. Oh where, where are the friends of me youth? O where are the loved ones gone?"

"I give it up," said Fiery Nose, after a few moments calm and patient thought.

"Don't you recollect how we used to go out on the trail and capture little children and gouge their eyes out, and chop 'em into bits, and then come home and learn our catechlims and knife our next-door neighbor, and then pray to the Great Manitou before we went to bed. Ah, those were happy, happy days, and we were hilarious little Ingins, weren't we. But now all these things are mingled with the irrevocable past, you can just bet they are."

"Why you're drunk, aint you?" asked Fiery Nose, "you're talking first-class drivel. Where do you get you're fire water? I'll have to get Senator Yates to come and lecture you on temperance."

To this Buffalo Bull deigned no reply, but pretending to see something on the top knot of Fiery Nose, he asked him to stoop down a minute while he picked it off. He then clandestinely jerked out his scalping knife and lifted his hair, after which he jabbed the knife into his vitals, and threw him on the grate to die.

Just then Prairie Flower returned with the tobacco, and perceiving at a glance that her parent was reduced to a cinder, she observed to Buffalo Bull that it seemed to be pretty well up with the old man.

"Hm-m, yes," said he; "but a thought strikes me—will you be mine?"

"Well, I don't know; let me see, what was your income tax last year?"

"I paid tax on two horse blankets, a Barlow knife, and thirty-seven scalps. Besides I love you to distraction. Come to this loving heart; rest on my bosom, rest. Say will you?"

"I am ever thine own," said Prairie Flower, as she nestled against his hunting shirt.

And on her lover's arm she leant,
And round her waiste she felt it fold;
He said "I do not care a cent."
She said "I'll bet he finds he's sold."

Thus were these two aboriginal savages made happy in the fullness of each other's love. She grew old and ugly in time, and he, in the depth of his unspeakable affection, used to sit day after day smoking on the front door steps, while she hoed corn and wheeled home potatoes in a push cart. Until at last she was called home to the happy hunting ground, and he immediately put fresh crape on his hat and began browsing around for another girl.

But does not this teach us all a lesson, that,—that—teach us, I say, a lesson that we—that we, I say, may—let that pass, however, doubtless it does teach a lesson, but it's of no consequence.

THE SOUR LAKE IN TEXAS.—About sixty miles from Houston, in Texas, in a low, wet prairie country, but itself on quite high and dry ground, and surrounded by a fine little forest, is a small lake, whose diameter may be counted by rods, the waters of which are so sour that it is almost impossible to drink them. A number of wells have been dug in the immediate vicinity, and the waters of these contain iron, alum, magnesia and sulphuric acid. Notwithstanding the difficulty of reaching the place and the poor accommodations, large numbers of invalids go there from Southern States to drink the water of the wells and bathe in the lake; and they experience immediate and remarkable benefit. The effect of the baths is sedative, and persons who have not slept comfortably for weeks, after taking a bath in the lake in the evening enjoy a refreshing night's rest. The water becomes more pleasant to the taste after a few glasses, and may be bottled or put in wooden casks without losing its strength. The soil is so strongly impregnated with the same qualities as the water that if the mud be dissolved in pure water and a little soda or saleratus put into it, it will foam and effervesce, and will be as sour as lemonade. Before the war a number of gentlemen were considering plans for building a large hotel at the place; but since then the project has been postponed. A number of gentlemen bought the property of a man who died about twenty-five years ago; but according to laws of Texas a man cannot sell his homestead without the consent of his wife, and a lady of Chicago, claiming to be the former owner's wife, has brought a suit to recover it under that law. The matter is still in litigation.

THE OLDEST WOODEN HOUSE.—The oldest wooden house in the United States is in Dorchester, soon to be a part of Boston. It was built in 1633, and is called the "Minot House," from the name of the first owner. The house was occupied by Gen. Washington and his body guard for a season, during the revolution. The house is two stories high, and the outside has by no means a bad look. Its frame is of oak, either Irish or white, and the beams are sound as ever, and likewise the whole frame, with the exception of the sills, is in a good state of preservation. The rooms are oddly shaped, and awkwardly arranged. The beams are in sight, and are finished off and beaded, and the ceiling is very low. Indeed, it is quite worth while to visit this ancient house. There is a little romance connected with it. During the early years of Dorchester, the Indians were very troublesome. The Neponset tribe made their headquarters in the village now of that name, and the chief's name was Chicatawbut, hence the name of the street on which the house stands. Mr. Minot being absent one day, an Indian came and tried to get admittance, but the heroine wife refused to admit him, knowing that it could be for no good intent, and taking down her husband's loaded gun she fired it at him, wounding him severely, and then, in a moment, threw a pailful of boiling water into his bosom. He fled to the woods and, as tradition says, was found dead the next morning near by, having died of his wounds. The woman was honored for her bravery by the inhabitants of the place by the presentation of a gold wristlet, with her name upon it, and the words, "Who slew the Naraganset Indian." The house is now occupied by a family who pay eighty dollars annual rent.

THE highest peak of the Rocky Mountains is 12,500 feet.

ICE FIELD IN THE DESERT.

The very hot weather reminds me of an incident which occurred in 1859, during a hot spell upon the very far frontiers. It was while a command of two companies of the old Second United States dragoons, under charge of Captain R. H. Anderson, of the same regiment, was on the march from what was then known as Camp Floyd, Utah Territory, to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. We had struck our tents at a very early hour in the morning, and as the first faint glimmer of daylight was observed in the east, the command was "straightened out" upon the road, and prepared for a long day's march under a burning July sun, for "Pacific Springs" had to be made that night to camp at, or horrible to think of, there would be no water. We started out lively and buoyant; both men and horses thoroughly enjoyed the beautiful cool morning air, bracing and invigorating as it was. The merry laugh and joke passed from front to rear, and each man enjoyed himself, apparently as well as soldiers could. The morning passed, the sun came out strong and brilliant, and soon the effects of his mighty heat became apparent. The jokes were passed less frequently, the laughs became fewer and shorter, and finally silence reigned among the bipeds, and nothing was heard but the tramp, tramp of the quadrupeds, and jingling of the equipments, and as old Sol rose higher, his piercing rays grew stronger and stronger, until the very horses grew languid and drooping. We halted to water and rest at noon, still under the burning sun, not a bush the size of a man's hat was to be seen which would afford us any shade. After an hour's broiling, the word was given to mount, the "forward" was sounded, and we resumed our melting way for that everlasting "Pacific" Spring; and pacific it ought to be, for our tempers as well as our bodies were sorely tried, and I am afraid there were more left-handed prayers said that day than even Parson Brownlow would approve of. About five o'clock P. M. we reached the Spring, after twelve hours steady set in the saddle, ten of which hours we were under the perpendicular rays of as hot a sun as it was ever my lot to experience, and I have been in not a few of the hot places of this earth, which I earnestly hope will be sufficient to keep me out of any of the hot places of the other world, all things else being equal.

The train arrived, the tents were pitched, and the order passed along to change the feeding ground of our animals, which had been picketed out immediately when we unsaddled, in the rear of our line of tents. About three hundred yards in front of our camp there was a very beautiful strip of fresh-looking grass, and for this point each man made with his horse.

The first man on the spot struck his picket pin into the ground, and it immediately rebounded as if it struck against a rock. Several more tried it, and the same thing happened; when one of the men stooped down, and inserting the point of his picket pin, turned up a portion of the sod, and lo! there was a bed of ice from four to ten inches thick. The news flew like lightning through the command, and in the excitement created by the cry of "ice! ice!" everything else in that camp was forgotten. Every pick, spade and shovel, and in fact anything that a man could dig with, was put into immediate requisition, even to the pocket knives; and in less time than I write this the strip of green grass was covered by anxious, hard-working men, as earnestly bent upon what they were at as if their lives depended upon ice. You may rest assured that that ice was a perfect God-send to that party of men, after our long and weary and dusty march over a country covered with sand and sage bush, under the rays of as hot a sun as I ever felt in the tropics; and that ice was prized as so much gold. Every empty gunny bag and every blanket was put into use to carry ice, and I do not believe that before or since such a load of ice ever crossed the Rocky Ridge as there did next day in our train. We all thought it strange, of course, that we should find ice there, six inches under the surface, in the month of July; but the philosophy of the circumstance was not thought of in the excitement and joy of obtaining it.

The Democratic Emblem—"Ye Rooster."

A correspondent of the Ohio Statesman inquires why the Rooster is used by the Democracy as an emblem of victory. That paper replies:

"Because the game rooster is the gamest bird when encroached upon by his fellows, that ever existed, and the democracy is the gamest party that ever voted at an election or resented oppression. Both the party and its emblem, when they go into the fight, make it a matter of life and death. Both may be whipped, but not conquered, for giving up, when once in the fight, is a word unknown to the practice of the Rooster tribe of the fowls found in the Democratic vocabulary."

The following historical incident induced the adoption of the emblem:

During the war of 1812 the British fleet on Lake Champlain was attacked by the American fleet under Commodore McDonough, which being much inferior to that of the English, suffered terribly in the first part of the battle. At the moment when it was raging fiercest—the heaviest fire of the enemy directed against the flagship of McDonough—his men driven from their guns by the fierce cannonade, and dismay sat upon every countenance, and the storm of iron hail, which seemed to threaten destruction not only to the ship but to every living soul therein, was at its height, a cannon ball struck a chicken coop and knocked it to pieces, killing all it contained but a moment before, save only a game Rooster, whose battered comb bore the marks of many a death fight. Flying upon the bulwarks of McDonough's flagship, the noble bird, undaunted by the noise and confusion and carnage around him, with clarion voice rang out his notes of defiance and victory.

Sailors are ever superstitious, and when, in the pause of the thunder of the enemy's cannon they heard the shrill "cock-a-doodle-doo," of the undaunted bird, they gathered new courage, and repairing again to their guns, returned anew the fire of the enemy, cheered by the loud crow of the brave emblem of the Democracy, until the battle ended and M'Donough, on Lake Champlain, like the Democracy in Ohio and Pennsylvania, was victorious over the enemies of the country.

Every naval historian makes mention of the fact, and history says that the bravery shown on that occasion by the rooster was the cause of the victory, by the renewed courage it gave the sailors in McDonough's fleet.

From that day to this, in political contests, the Rooster has been the Democratic emblem of victory, and when it is seen, in the act of sending forth its "cock-a-doodle-doo," at the head of a Democratic newspaper, it is right to say the country is safe, for the victory is with the Democracy.

HIT HIM AGAIN.—Somebody—a crusty bachelor, of course—inquires why, when Eve was manufactured of a spare rib, a servant wasn't made at the same time to wait on her. Somebody else—a woman, we imagine—replies in the following strain:

"Because Adam never came whining to Eve with a ragged stocking to be darned, collar string to be sewed on, or a glove to mend 'right away, quick now!' Because he never read the newspaper until the sun got down behind the palm trees, and he stretching out, yawned out: 'Ain't supper most ready, my dear?' Not he. He made the fire and hung the kettle over it himself, we'll venture; and pulled the radishes, peeled the potatoes, and did everything else he ought to do. He milked the cows, fed the chickens, and looked after the pigs himself, and he never brought home half a dozen friends to dinner when Eve hadn't any fresh pomegranates. He never stayed out till 11 o'clock to a political meeting, hurrahing for an out and out candidate, and then scolding because poor Eve was sitting up and crying inside the gates. He never played billiards, rolled ten-pins and drove fast horses, nor choked Eve with cigar smoke. He never loafed around corner groceries while Eve was rocking Cain's cradle at home. In short, he didn't think she was especially created for the purpose of waiting on him, and wasn't under the impression that it disgraced a man to lighten a wife's cares a little. That's the reason that Eve did not need a hired girl, and with it was the reason that her fair descendants did."

"I THOUGHT THEY HAD STOPPED YOUR GROG."—The following story is told by "Mark Twain" of a gallant naval officer:

Twenty or thirty years ago, when missionary enterprise was in its infancy among the Islands of the South Seas, Capt. Somers anchored his sloop-of-war off one the Marquesas, I think it was. The next morning he saw an American flag floating from the beach, Union down. This excited him fearfully, of course, and he sent off a boat at once to inquire into the matter. Presently the boat returned and brought a grave looking missionary. The Captain's anxiety was very high, and he said:

"What's the trouble out there?—say quick!"

"Well, I'm grieved to say," said the missionary, "that the natives have been interrupting our sacerdotal exercises."

"No! Blast their yaller hides, I'll—what—what was it you said they had been doing?"

"It pains me sir, to say that they have been interrupting our sacerdotal exercises."

"Interrupting your—your—h—ll! Man them starboard guns! Stand by, now, to give 'em the whole battery!"

The astonished clergyman hastened to protest against such excessively rigorous measures, and finally succeeded in making the old tar understand that the natives had only been breaking up a prayer meeting.

"Oh, devil take it, man, is that all? I thought you meant that they'd stopped your grog."

The Election--Its Teachings.

The election is over and its result clearly astertained. The unprecedented changes in popular sentiment indicated by the recent elections in Maine and California, have been more than rivalled by the Democratic gains in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Iowa and Connecticut. On the shores of the Atlantic and the Pacific, in the mountains of the East and the prairies of the West, the change is equally marked and decisive.

Nor do the radicals, in ciphering out the cause of this overwhelming defection in their ranks, ascribe it to the true reason. It was not caused by Sunday laws, for these are only local in their application. It is not the result of the Temperance question, for the change is equally astounding in the cities and in the rural districts. The unparalleled corruption of our last Legislature did not cause the radical route, for in Ohio the defection is still greater than here.

But it is alleged that the Radicals did not vote while the Democrats did. This, if it were true, proves nothing, or worse than nothing, in accounting for their defeat. They all know that the election is held on the 2d Tuesday of October, and those radicals who refused to exercise the right of suffrage had either changed their views, or were so doubtful of their correctness as to refuse to enforce them by ballot. Indeed, a small election may as truly represent the sentiments of the State as a large one, for those unwilling to assert their principles at the ballot-box may well be supposed to have none worth asserting, while those who have to be dragged to the window are the very poorest specimens of sovereignty.

But this does not account for the change. The election returns show that in Philadelphia and several of the counties last year's majority is reversed, while the returns of Cambria county show the same thing in at least two of the districts, which, being boroughs, would be supposed to poll a full vote. But besides this we know of many instances in which Republicans have voted with us from a change of opinion, and the same has been the case throughout the State and country.

The causes of the Radical defeat are so transparent that he that runs may read them.

The history of our country has been made by the Democratic party, and their opponents, by what name soever they may have been known, (and their name is legion,) have uniformly lost their power, almost as soon as acquired, by their wanton aggression on the rights of the sovereign people.

At an early day, when they bore the more respectable name of Federalists, under the elder Adams, they lost power by inflicting upon the people the odious and ever to be execrated Alien and Sedition laws, the odium of which will outlive the name under which the party then rallied.

From that time the Democrats wielded the power of the nation for a quarter of a century, the most glorious as well as prosperous era of the republic, until a second Adams was accidentaly chosen against the suffrages of a large majority of the people. At the next election the wrong was repaired in the election of Jackson.

Again, in 1840, under the name of Whig, by a spasmodic effort Harrison was elected President, but his early death, and the conservatism of his successor, prevented the abuse of power, and the Whigs lost the fruits of their victory.

Again, in 1848, the opposition to the Democrats succeeded in carrying the President through the militaay popularity of Gen. Taylor. His death put Mr. Fillmore in the Presidential chair, whose conservative sentiments restrained the spirit of evil, and has since made him a supporter of Democratic principles.

Thus far the rule of the Radicals, or those whose successors they are, were brief and at distant periods. In 1860 the divisions in the Democratic party gave them a new lease of power, which they prepared themselves to embrace by nominating a purely sectional ticket upon sectional grounds; and which was followed, as every Statesman saw it would be followed, by secession.

Had the administration of Lincoln been peaceful, the Democrats would naturally have been restored to power in 1864. But the war kept life in the organization, and upon the Lincolnian theory that it is 'not safe to swap horses crossing a stream,' he was re-elected.

But in re-nominating Mr. Lincoln his friends did not dare to put him on a Republican platform, but changed their name [illegible] nor did they dare to bellion surrendered, and our citizen soldiers returned home to resume the peaceful avocations of life. The President followed the same course that Lincoln had indicated, by considering the crushing of the rebellion as the restoration of the Union. Gen. Grant was sent South to ascertain the state of public sentiment in the South, and he reported that the Southern people accepted the situation in good faith, and should be restored to their privileges as citizens.

Republicanism had fulfilled its destiny. It had made a desert of the South and irrecoverably destroyed our greatest field of commerce, and had restored the slave to freedom, misery and indigence. It had spilled the best blood of the nation, and burdened us with a debt that crushes us to the earth, with no hope that the youngest child will live to see it paid. It took from us the Liberty of the Press, the right of Free Speech, the Habeas Corpus, the Trial by Jury, and other Constitutional rights. It crippled our material resources more than fifty years of Democratic rule can restore.

But it set the slaves at liberty, and the North rejoiced at this, and the South, in the language of General Grant, acquiesced in it in good faith. It might be supposed that this was sufficient to satisfy the rampant spirit of Radicalism itself. But not so. To stop here, the mission of the Radical party would be at an end, and it would, like its predecessors, naturally go down. Peace confirmed—a Union restored—the Constitution and Laws enforced—and the Radical dynasty passes away just as surely as a morning sun dissipates the dews of the night.

Then, how shall we retain power? is the question with Radicals. Bold bad men, like Stevens, dreamy philosophers like Sumner, demagogues like Wilson, and plunderers like Ben. Butler, are ready to lead the way to the most daring innovations of the Constitution—the most revolutionary enactments. We shall not now refer to these in detail, but shall close this article by declaring what it is our solemn conviction has been decided by the recent elections:

1. That the war against the South is ended, and peace exists through our whole country, North and South.

2. The rebellion having failed in taking the Southern States out of the Union, they are still members of it, and are entitled to representation in Congress.

3. That the State of Kentucky was never out of the Union, and is entitled to be represented in Congress.

4. That the Southern States being in the Union, it is contrary to the letter or spirit of the Constitution to place the military above the civil power in those States.

5. That the Southern States are bound to support their own paupers, and therefore the Freedman's Bureau law, which supports the southern blacks at the expense of the Northern whites, is unjust and oppressive.

6. That Congress has no power to impose Negro suffrage upon Pennsylvania without the consent of her citizens.

7. That the war being ended for more than two years, it is time to cease making appeals to the worst passions of the human heart against those who were our brethren, and who must have the same country, the same Constitution, and the same destiny with ourselves.

8. That while the Radical States of the North prohibit the few negroes among them from voting, the white people of Pennsylvania are not only opposed to be governed by the ignorant blacks of the South, but unwilling to hand the Southern States over to a government of the blacks.

ANOTHER WOLF IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING.—There is intense excitement just now in Kokomo, Indiana, over the moral delinquencies of the principal of a high school in that town, a flourishing institution of over six hundred pupils of the male gender.

The principal was a graduate of a New England college, and came recommended as a pious gentleman and accomplished scholar. He was good looking, well dressed, self-poised and a deacon in a fashionable church.

It was developed a few days ago that he was guilty of practices too revolting to be named, and which would eclipse the enormities of Rev. Sereno Howe. The culprit, known as Rev. Erastus M. Fay, fled to escape the summary punishment of an outraged community.

THE Radicals have lost the Legislature of Ohio. They have lost the entire law-making power of the State, for the Governor there has no veto power. They have lost the United States Senator, Benjamin F. Wade. They have lost the Negro Suffrage amendment by half a hundred thousand majority. They have lost forty thousand out of their last year's forty-two thousand majority in the State. Yet they profess to be very much elated that they have retained their Governor. Well it would be too ungenerous for the Democrats to deprive them of this small crumb [illegible] in Pa.

THE Empress Eugenie and her son, the Prince Imperial, were recently cast into the sea in consequence of the capsizing of a boat in which they were being conveyed from a steam yacht to the landing at Biarritz. The royal party was saved with great difficulty, but one of the sailors was drowned.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—It is said that the poet Longfellow has become a Roman Catholic.

—A man in Illinois, who was stabbed in the back twelve years ago, recently coughed up an inch and a half of knife blade.

—The election of Sprague, Democratic judicial candidate in California, is conceded on partial returns from twenty-one counties.

—The Mary Harris who killed Burroughs is in the Government insane asylum at Washington—not Congress, but the other one.

—Advices from Vera Cruz state that the trial of General Santa Anna had resulted in a sentence of exile from the Mexican territory for eight years.

—A Paris journal says that the unfortunate Empress Charlotta of Mexico, has become worse than ever, and that there is now no hope of her recovery. She is under strict surveillance.

—George Leeming, a blacksmith at Jeansville, Pa., has fallen heir to an estate in England estimated at more than a million of dollars, and has sailed for that country to take possession.

—The trial of Jefferson Davis will probably come off in Richmond on the 28th. There is to be an effort to obtain a white jury. The jury to try him now stands 9 negroes to 3 white men.

—From New Orleans we have the gratifying intelligence that the yellow fever, after enrolling nearly four thousand on its list of victims, is abating. This pestilence has been one of the severest scourges of the afflicted South.

—A lady of Ridgeville, Lorain county, Ohio, having the rheumatism in her hip, recently employed an Elyria doctor, who administered morphine by blowing it into the veins. It affected the whole system, went to the heart, and caused her death in an hour.

—A real live manatee, or sea cow, has been captured in the St. Louis river, Florida, and brought to Savannah by the steamer Dictator. So few in number have been the captures of this wonderful creature, that the fact of its existence in Florida has been doubted.

—A woman at Westville, near New Haven, Conn., has recently lost both cheek bones, which were diseased from the inhalation of phosphorus, while working in a match factory. She can now only take liquid food, the roof of the mouth being sewed to the upper lip.

—A tipsy fellow in Dubuque escaped from some friends who were anxious to smash his head, and leaping into the river with a roll of greenbacks tightly grasped in his hand, swam with one arm a distance of one mile—a feat which would have been impossible for a temperate man.

—The rocks which obstruct Boston harbor are being removed by Ehrhardt's safety powder, a Prussian invention. One hundred and fifty tons of rock have been removed in six days by eight pounds of this powder, while but twenty tons were removed by over five hundred pounds of ordinary powder and thirty-nine days work.

—The citizens of Fitchburg, Mass., were greatly excited on Sunday by finding the body of Frederick Powers buried in a sand-bank. The body exhibited several stabs, and a wooden gag was found in his mouth. Two Frenchmen and an American have been arrested on suspicion of the murder.

—A day or two since, a peculiar odor was noticed in and about the house of a gentleman who resides at Sandwich, which none of the family could account for. On inspection it was found that the house cat (a huge Maltese) had been shut up in an oven, where she had concealed herself, and was literally roasted alive.

—John Kern, of Jersey Shore, superintendent of masonry at the Lewisburg railroad and wagon bridge, now in progress of construction, met with a terrible death the other day. The derrick on which he was at work broke and fell, crushing his head in a horrible manner and scattering his brains into the river.

—A terrible accident occurred at the Hoosac Tunnel on Saturday, by which thirteen men were killed outright or suffocated to death. The gasoline works at the mouth of the shaft exploded and burned, falling down the shaft and burying the whole gang of workmen at the bottom. The bodies will not be exhumed for several days.

—The other day, Mrs. Carr, of Pittsburgh, bought a black cat, from which she took three drops of blood to give a child sick of croup. Her excited neighbors were about to mob the old lady for witchcraft, when the authorities interfered. Twenty witnesses proved in court that the child recovered instantly on taking the sanguinary dose of catnip.

—Some three years ago a man was arrested in New York and incarcerated in a foul and loathsome cell of a dungeon by military edict, his only crime being that he had spoken "disrespectfully of Mrs. Lincoln"—but she was the wife of the government then. The Radical papers are now saying worse things about her than were ever dreamed of by any Democrat.

A WHITE GIRL FIVE YEARS OLD OUTRAGED BY A NEGRO.—The Philadelphia News of the 14th says: "One of the most damnable crimes that we have ever heard of was brought to light in our city last night. Mrs. Burns resides on Centre street, between Green and Walnut, with her only daughter, Lucy, a sprightly girl, aged five years. The family are poor, but, beyond their poverty, they are guilty of no other offense. For some time a negro man by the name of J. H. Thomas has been doing various little things for Mrs. Burns, until he has succeeded in ingratiating himself into her favor. One evening about three weeks ago, during the absence of Mrs. Burns, the negro entered the house, and, by force outraged the person of the young girl. The heinousness of the offense does not end here, as he communicated to her a most loathsome disease. The Negro, hearing that the officers were upon his track, fled and did not return until last night, when he was arrested and committed to jail by officers Sayre and Enlow."

More of the Lincoln Scandal.

The Lincoln scandal increases. The papers are filled with it. The following is retailed by the New York correspondent of the Boston Post:

When Lyons represented England at the court of the Republic, his wife had a waiting maid who took the fancy of a certain lady in the White House. By promise of preferment and increased wages this waiting maid was induced to transfer her services from Lady Lyons to another lady whose name had the same initial. She thought, poor thing, that she would have nothing to do but to exhibit herself about the White House; but this delusion was very speedily dispelled, for it was only a few days when she was set to making drawers out of the linen sheets of the establishment. This wounded her feelings so much that she soon "gave notice" to her employer, and when she subsequently spoke of her sorrows to her friends, she said that the extraordinary length of the drawers she was employed on left no doubt on her mind as to the person who was to have the comfort of wearing them.

"Mrs. Clark" made several trips to New York in the war times, and made some extensive purchases each time she came. On one occasion, the proprietor of a leading jewelry and furnishing establishment on Broadway received (so the story goes) an order for a beautiful chandelier for the White House. The price of the chandelier was $500; but somebody (as I was not present at the time I will not be positive about names) suggested that bill should be made out for $1,000, and that the difference should be made up in jewelry. But the gentleman to whom the proposition was made respectfully declined to entertain it, and I think his chandelier was not sent to Washington.

On another occasion, a Broadway dealer, well known throughout the country, was favored with an order for some superfine sets of porcelain and China ware for the national establishment. The value of the set was $800, but other purchases made at the same time brought the bill up to $2,200. The storekeeper was requested to make the porcelain and China ware cover the whole amount of the bill, and, to oblige his customer, he did so. The bill went to the Secretary of the Interior, who said to himself, "$2,200 is a very high price for those sets; I must look into it." He did look into it by sending an agent to a large furnishing house in Philadelphia, where the same kind of goods were sold, and the agent went back to Washington with the information that the Philadelphia price of the article was $800. The Secretary of the Interior then wrote to the Broadway dealer to know how he came to charge $2,200 for goods that were sold for $800 in Philadelphia, and the merchant wrote back that he charged only $800 for them, and that the extra $1,400 covered the purchases which had not been specified.

You see how closely these stories resemble Lord Thurlow's, but they are not so well told. I can never hope to become equal to Thurlow at story telling.

Another incident, illustrative of character, has just occurred to me. One day Mrs. L. drove up, or was driven up, in front of Genin's store, under the St. Nicholas, and leaning out of the carriage she beckoned to one of the clerks, who was speaking to a friend at the door, to go to her. He knew her very well, but took no notice of her motions. She beckoned again and again, but he did not go near her. Finally another lady, who was in the carriage, stepped out, and walking up to him, asked him if he knew who that lady (Mrs. L.) was. He replied somewhat indifferently, that he did not care.

"Why," said she, bridling up, "that is Mrs. Lincoln, and she wants you to wait on her." "I don't know any difference between Mrs. Lincoln and the wife of a mechanic," said the clerk. "If she will come into the store I will attend to her, but I am not employed to wait on people in the street." A complaint to Mr. Genin followed, as a matter of course, but the clerk did not lose his place.

To return to the relics. It is singular, to say the least, that these beautiful and expensive articles are allowed to go a-begging, as it were. But so it is. Very few of them have been sold, as yet, and the prospect of all being disposed of by private sale is by no means cheering. If they remain unsold by next Monday, they are to be put up at auction, and Mrs. Toodles, with her whole family, will be on the spot looking for bargains. It is a pity there are no doorplates in the collection.

VERY TRUE.—In a letter of Archbishop Purcell to the Rev. Mr. Vickers, upon some ecclesiastical differences, he says:

"If Mr. Vickers sincerely desires to estimate aright the light or darkness of the human mind, from the sixth to the fourteenth century, let him stand as we have lately done, under the lofty arcres of the grand old cathedrals of Strasburg, of Paris, of Amiens, of Beauvais, of Chartres, of Milan, all built at that period, and ask himself who built them? Who composed those magnificent epics, those poems in stone; or if his head becomes not giddy at such an elevation, let him ascend one of the lofty spires of those fine old minsters, and he will see further into his own ignorance than a 'pigmy could have seen on the shoulders of a giant.' He will also conclude that the sciences are sisters, and that architecture could not have created such wonders if those sisters had not stood beside her."

We don't think that the ages which gave us the science of arithmetical numbers, the mariners" compass, the discovery of America, the discovery of printing and of gunpowder, can be considered very dark. The "darkness" is only the want of information of those who thus characterize them.

—The Green Bay, Wisconsin, Gazette, says William Mitchell, one of the old settlers of the State, having come round the lakes in a canoe, and whose wife was the first white child born in Wisconsin, celebrated his silver wedding the other day.

France and the Roman States.

It is now said that Napoleon has finally determined to interfere in the affairs of the Roman States. A council of ministers was held at St. Cloud on the 16th inst., at which the Emperor presided. The result of that meeting was a resolution that France should take immediate steps for a settlement of the Roman question, and that such steps should be taken without the consent or co-operation of Victor Emanuel or the Italian government. The leading French journals approve the resolution of the government. The Moniteur reproaches the Italians for violating the laws of nations, endangering the peace of Europe, disregarding the obligations of solemn treaties, and fostering a dangerous spirit of republicanism, and the Patrie argues in a bold and earnest manner, that the intervention of France is absolutely and immediately necessary to save Italy from revolution and anarchy. There are other papers which have expressed opinons and sentiments upon this subect. They all applaud the course of the Emperor and the government, and some of them speak in such a manner as to induce the suspicion that an outbreak with Victor Emanuel would not be distasteful or unpopular in France at this time. He is charged with want of action, with secretly approving the movements of Garibaldi and his revolutionists, and with desiring to acquire Rome and the Roman States in such a manner as to shield Italy from the consequences that would arise from an open and palpable violation of treaty obligations.

The basis of the contemplated action of Napoleon will be the treaty of September 15, 1864. By the express provisions of that treaty Victor Emanuel is bound not to attack the States of the Pope, but, on the contrary, to defend the temporal possessions of the Church in case they are attacked or menaced from within or without. On the part of France the obligation was equally explicit and emphatic. Napoleon assumed a semi-protectorate over the temporal affairs of the head of the Catholic Church. In case the treaty of September, 1864, was violated by bands of organized and armed revolutionists within that kingdom, and Victor Emanuel refused to check such outbreak, or was not competent to do so, then it was clearly understood that France would push an army into such a position as to make good the demands of the treaty. That point has now been reached. Garibaldi is heading a revolution outside of Rome, and Mazzini calling upon the people of that city to rise and declare in favor of a republic. The revolutionists have invaded the Papal States, attacked and in some cases defeated the troops of the Pope, and are pressing on towards the City of Rome. No steps have been taken by Victor Emanuel to prevent this invasion of the dominions of the Church. He allowed the insurgents to organize in Italy, to prepare their plans within his kingdom, to muster in force, to cross the frontier, and attack the troops of the ruler, whom by the treaty of September, 1864, he was solemnly bound to protect.

As Victor Emanuel has failed to fulfill his obligations, Napoleon now stands forth as the defender of those promises he made when entering into the compact of September, 1864. France will defend the States of the Church from revolutionary violence. If in that defense Italy is pressed backward from her present position, the fault will not lie at the door of France. Victor Emanuel voluntarily entered into the treaty obligation which he is now refusing or neglecting to enforce. Napoleon means to keep his promises. He cannot afford to see revolution successful at the present time. He remembers it was an Italian that attempted to take his own life in the streets of Paris, and he knows that the radicals of Italy bear him no good will. They are opposed to him and his dynasty. On the contrary, the Roman people look upon France as their friend. Napoleon has been the defender of the Latin race, and he now takes the field to protect the Roman States from the Revolutionary attempts of Garibaldi and his adherents. Will other nations interfere in this question? It is not probable that they will? Russia has no immediate interest in the controversy. Austria, of course would not protect Italy from a blow which would humble her pride, and Prussia is intent on issues nearer home. If Napoleon interferes, the question will be limited to France, Italy and Rome, and the result cannot be doubtful.—Philadelphia Age.

ANOTHER HINT.—With the present num of the Freeman closes the first nine ths of its existence, and we cannot be ve that there is one subscriber upon our who now doubts the stability of our en- prise, provided they themselves do their t. From the first we have met with st generous encouragement, and to-day can boast a list second to no other in the nty, not only in the number of names up- it, but in the character of the men who ppea it. Of the nine hundred and odd scribers who at present take our paper el confident that there is not one hun- l who have not yet paid for it who would do so if personally solicited. While we rtain this confidence, however, we wish avoid the trouble and expense of collect- what is due us at the end of the year, hence we propose to accept $2 for the sent year's subscription, if paid soon, but ll be satisfied with nothing less than 50 if we are compelled to collect it at the e of the current volume. There are some hundred names on our book to which re is either no credit at all or only credit a portion of the year, and to each and all these we say we have found the bottom our purse, and if it does not place them the same unenviable position, we trust hough we confess we would rather not t any longer) that they will respond to appeal without delay. So roll in the nbacks, every mother's son of you, and will not only gladden the printer's heart you will enjoy the pleasure of reading wn paper for the next three months me, at least. Do not indulge the hu- frailty of believing that this hint is de- ed for some of your neighbors, but bear mind, if you have not yet paid us, that we ed the money and that you can save a half ar by letting us have it right away.

CASUALITIES, LOCAL AND GENERAL.—
Our young friend, Dan. Zahm, of Cambria nship, killed an otter near his father's dence, on Monday last. Rare game in "neck of timber."

A large steam tannery located at Nossville, untingdon county, belonging to a Mr. s of New York city, was destroyed by on Sunday week last, together with lea- r, hides, and all else it contained. Loss s ascertained.

John Buzzard, the demented old man om we noticed a couple of weeks ago as ving wandered away from the residence of s niece, in Susquehanna township, was nd in the woods, several days afterwards, an exhausted condition, and properly ed for.

A diminutive quadruped of the genus pole- t met with an untimely death at the hands several youths of the masculine persua- on Main street on Monday evening last. skunkship "wasted his fragrance on the sett air" with a perfect looseness, for sev- l hours after his tragic taking-off. Re- ies-polecat.

Our clever postmaster, Mr. Reese J. Lloyd, putting in a new front and otherwise re- ing the store room recently occupied by r. Zahner, jeweler, and into which he will ortly remove his stock of drugs, etc., as ell as the post-office. Mr. Zahner has re- oved his stock and fixtures to his residence, pposite the public school house.

R. A. Shoemaker, Esq., of this place, has come the possessor of the fine farm just side the limits of our borough, known as Hugh Hughes' property. He paid $4,- 00 for it, which may be considered dirt eap. Mr. S. will offer at public sale, on Sunday, Nov. 9th, the two farms near town own as the Reese and Davis farms.

Mrs. Lena Miller, condemned to be hung Clearfield next month for the poisoning of r husband, had the death warrant read to r a few days ago. It seemed to have but ttle effect upon the unfortunate woman, who manifested the same stolid indifference aintained by her throughout the trial. hen asked if she was ready to meet her ate, she promptly replied, "yes, to-morrow, f necessary."

A young man named Martin shot another amed Smith, in South Huntingdon town- ip, Westmoreland county, not long since, hile the latter was peaceably seated on the ont steps of his residence. Four shots ere fired, three taking effect, one in the jaw nd the other two in the arm and shoulder. he wounds are serious but not dangerous. oth young men were paying attention to he same girl, and hence the difficulty. Mar- n made his escape, and was not arrested at last accounts.

It is said that a man got on a passenger ain at Pittsburgh, on Saturday week, hav- g in his possession a carpet-sack contain- g some $20,000 worth of diamonds and atches. While crossing the mountains he ll asleep, and woke up at Altoona to find at his own carpet-sack, with all its trea- res, had been purloined and another one ontaining a few packages of rice and sugar ubstituted in its place. No clue has yet een had to the perpetrators of this daring obbery, but the victim himself is of the pinion that the thief or thieves followed im from St. Louis or Cincinnati.

Two young men offered a span of horses nd a barouche, which they represented to e the property of a Mr. Howard, of Pitts- urgh, for whom they claimed to be acting, t public sale in Greensburg, a short time go, and they were knocked down to a citi- en of that place for $160. Before paying or them, however, the purchaser telegraphed o Mr. Howard and ascertained that the oung men's story was all bosh. They were onsequently arrested, and were afterwards ecognized as two young men named Bless- ng and Graham, who had hired the turn-out at a livery stable in Erie, and to that place hey were taken for trial.

CONGRATULATORY.—Our mercantile friend, Jim Thompson, must just now be one of the most buoyant and happy mortals in this community, and we doubt not he is in the best mood possible at the present moment for giving the greatest bargains to the great- est number. Now is the time to buy cheap- er than ever at his well stocked store.

HOME AGAIN.—Cham. Roberts has "made the landing" on his native heath once again, followed closely from the Eastern cities by a superb stock of things useful and orna- mental. With more room, more goods and less prices than ever, Cham. ought to add largely to his throng of customers.

FATHER LEMKE.—We clip from the Herald, Elizabeth city, N. J., the following no- tice of the labors of Father Henry Lemke in his new sphere. Everything with which his name is connected possesses an interest for the admirers of the venerable priest. We need scarcely explain that our Carroll- town is confounded with Carrollton, Mary- land:

MR. EDITOR—On the first Sunday of Oc- tober the commencement of another impor- tant religious improvement will be made in our city. A solemn laying of the corner stone of a German Catholic school house, to be erected on that fine property on the cor- ner of Magnolia and Spring streets, which Rev. H. Lemke purchased about four years since, and has recently commenced to im- prove. The purchase of this large plot of ground by the Rev. Father Henry was a matter of surprise to his congregation, many of whom wondered what he intended to use it for, but now the mystery has been re- vealed. Last Sunday the venerable pastor of St. Michael's announced that he had ob- tained the approbation of the Bishop, and consent of his congregation, to transfer the old church site at Smith street to this new and more suitable location, which he had by his own means purchased, but now entirely devotes to this religious purpose.

It is intended, however, to commence first with the School and Sisters' house, which will be at the same time large enough to re- ceive the orphans not only of the German Catholic Church of this city, but also those of other cities of the diocese. It will, we understand, be a large and imposing struc- ture, 36 feet wide by 100 feet long, and 2 1-2 stories high. We have no doubt of the speedy completion of this new work, as it is not the first institution of this kind that Father Henry has inaugurated and success- fully carried out. We noticed a short time since, in one of the Pennsylvania journals, alluding to his purchase of a large tract of land in Cambria county, Pa., where he com- menced and reared the infant settlement, Carrolltown, home of the first Catholic Bish- op of the United States. This has since grown into a large and flourishing place, with religious institutions belonging to the Benedictines. May his undertaking now, though not so extensive as his former one, be equally advantageous to his flock.

The Vicar General of the Diocese, Rev. B. J. M'Quaid, will lay the corner stone at 3 o'clock, Sunday, Oct. 7, and address the peo- ple. A large turn out of the Catholic con- gregations is expected.

BARN DESTROYED BY FIRE.—A large bank barn located on the farm of Mr. Robert Ed- wards, (at present occupied by his son,) in Blacklick township, some seven or eight miles from this place, was totally destroyed by fire, on Sunday night last, together with the entire stock of grain, hay, harness and one colt belonging to Mr. Edwards, as well as a wagon owned by one of his neighbors. There seems to be no room to doubt that the fire was the work of an incendiary, as there had been no one about the barn who had any business there, the family having been absent during the day at church, and only reached home at a late hour of the night, when they discovered the barn to be on fire and the flames under such headway that it was impossible to extinguish them. Mr. Edwards' loss will probably exceed $2,000. We did not learn whether he had any insur- ance.

DR. J. W. HADLEY, the justly celebrated Physician for chronic and acute diseases without the use of medicine or surgical in- struments, will remain at the Scott House, Johnstown, until Nov. 1st, healing the sick and afflicted. Dr. Hadley neither uses med- icines nor instruments, yet diseases that baf- fle the most skillful are cured by his treat- ment. His cures are wonderful—too much so to believe were they not attested to by men and women of undoubted veracity and the highest respectability.

Dr. Hadley can refer to persons in Johns- town who have been walking on crutches for years, and who have been enabled by the Doctor's treatment to walk home without them in twenty minutes after calling on him. Persons afflicted should lose no time in visit- ing the Doctor. Parties unable to pay will be treated without charge, cleanliness being the only requisite demanded of them.

CONCERT.—A grand vocal and instru- mental concert under the auspices of the Mountaineer Base Ball Club of this place, is in contemplation and will probably be given in course of a couple of weeks. Few towns in the State can boast the possession of so much musical talent, in proportion to the number of its inhabitants, as Ebensburg, and hence we are not promising too much when we bespeak for our citizens an enter- tainment in the approaching concert which cannot fail to give entire satisfaction. We hope to see our young friends greeted by a large and appreciated audience.

BEAR IN MIND.—The extensive clothing store of J. A. Maguire & Co., which will be found advertised elsewhere in our columns, is the only one in this community specially devoted to the sale of gentlemen's ready- made garments and furnishing goods, and we know it to be a fact that this firm has the facilities for not only keeping a full line of the best goods; but it is as well prepared to sell at as low prices as like articles can be bought at any establishment in the county.

GEIS & REUTH.—We have no hesitation in recommending to the patronage of all our friends the enterprising firm named above. They this week make known through our columns what they have and what they can do, and to all who wish to buy what they sell, or need binding of any kind done, we say in all sincerity give them a trial. They are liberal and deserving, and will be found worthy of encouragement.

Wake! Betsy, wake!
My fair galoot,
And with me to Shoemaker's
Come and buy a suit;
And the Furniture, too, you know,
That we want to make a show.
So come, and do not longer tarry—
We'll buy them from Shoemaker—Harry.

THE MUSICAL REVIEW.—We have before us the second number of the "United States Musical Review." To our musical friends we recommend this valuable monthly peri- odical as in every way worthy of their sup- port. Our sanctum will furnish the inqui- rer with a specimen number. It is publish- ed in New York.

LUMBER BURNT.—A pile of lumber loca- ted at the east end of town, containing some 15,000 or 20,000 feet, the property of E. Hughes & Co., caught fire from a spark thrown from the locomotive on the Branch railroad, on Monday morning last, and was entirely consumed.

NEW STOCK.—Mr. V. S. Barker has just opened one of the largest, cheapest and prettiest assortments of Fall and Winter goods to be found in the county. If you want to get something neat and cheap, just drop in and see him. No charge for show- ing goods.

LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.

JOHNSTOWN, OCT. 21, 1867.

Dear Freeman—The past week has been a trying one on local reporters, and your cor- respondent, after vainly endeavoring to hunt up an interesting item, is compelled to apol- ogize for a committnity as large as this which will allow an entire week to go by without creating the least sensation.

Major R. Ryckman, Chief of Police at this place, and late Republican candidate for Sheriff, met with a very severe accident at Pittsburgh, (where he was in attendance at the hearing of the alleged shovers of coun- terfeit money,) about 3 o'clock on Friday morning last. He had went to the depot for the purpose of returning home, and reached it just in time to see the train move off, and while attempting to overtake it, fell through some trestle-work and sustained a fracture of two ribs and other injuries about his per- son. He returned home in the evening, however, and is now doing well.

A man named Martin fell from the Em- grant train on the Pennsylvania railroad, about three miles west of this place, on Tuesday of last week, while it was under full headway, and singular to say, escaped with only a few slight bruises.

An alarm of fire was given on Cinder st., one day last week, and the "steam squirt" was promptly on the ground, but a few buc- kets of water, judiciously applied, subdued the threatened conflagration. The fire ori- ginated in a defective flue.

A widow lady residing in Conemaugh bor- ough, named Mrs. Lynch, had a valuable cow killed to-day at the head of Portage st., by the C. I. Co.'s engine.

John B. Wright and George B. Waters, the alleged shovers of counterfeit National currency, who victimized several of our citi- zent a few days ago, have been held for an- other hearing in Pittsburgh at an early day.

Two female pugelists had a "mill" on the "Island," on Saturday last. M'Coole and Jones couldn't have fought as wicked, al- though they might have done it more scien- tifically.

A German who resides on Portage street had his pocket picked of $180 last week. He had been on an elongated drunk for sev eral days and by showing his money at dif- ferent saloons offered an excellent induce- ment for the light fingered. He has since sobered up.

A valuable overcoat was stolen from the clothing store of Jas. J. Murphy, this even- ing. The thief deliberately lifted the coat from a stand in front of the store, and made off ere he could be identified.

A can of oysters was stolen from the gro- cery of Mr. Edwart's, on Canal street last week. The surreptitious taker of the bi- valves was overhauled after a rigorous chase, and having a hearing before a magistrate, was bound over.

The fruit can business has been tremen- dous in this locality during the past season —that enterprising dealer F. W. Hay, alone disposing of over 32,000 cans.

"S. B." is indebted to John Bonner, an attache of the Indiana Democrat, for several recent copies of that stirling paper. Jack is a hunky boy, and works on one of the best county papers in this State. I see "prohibition" is rather flattened out in that benighted county. SEU BAL.

DON'T BELIEVE IT.—It is said that corn is selling in Oskaloosa, Iowa, for eight cents per bushel. We are not prepared to "ac- knowledge the corn," but we believe, what is more important to the people of this sec- tion, that dry goods, groceries, notions, etc., are being sold at Mills & Davis' cheap store at prices that cannot fail to astonish the natives. No dealers in this neighborhood give better bargains.

MARRIED.

BRALLIER—WAREHAM.—At the res- idence of the officiating clergyman, in Ty- rone, Blair county, on the 16th inst., by Rev. H. R. Holsinger, Mr. L. Roberts Brallier and Miss Susie Wareham, both of Blacklick tp., this county.

The happy couple did not forget the print- er, and we cannot do less than wish them an a'u dance of the choicest blessings. We sincerely hope that peace and contentment will ever find a place at their fireside, and that the little responsibilties which follow in the train of wedded bliss will only add to their mutual happiness throughout life.

DIED.

JONES.—In this place, on Friday even- last, Griffith Jones, aged about 50 years.

We first knew the deceased in 1889, when his mind was but slightly eccentric. Some years afterwards, however, his mind became so impaired that he was sent to the State Insane Asylum, from which institution he subsequently escaped, and for many years has been residing in our town and its vicin- ity. He was entirely harmless and very kind hearted. His health had been bad for several months, but he had been moving about until the day of his death.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

MEDICAL USE OF SALT.—In many cases of disordered stomach, a teaspoonful of salt is a certain cure. In the violent internal aching, termed cholic, add a teaspoonful of salt to a pint of cold water—drink it, and go to bed; it is one of the speediest remedies known. The same will revive a person who seems almost dead from receiving a very heavy fall, &c.

In an apoplectic fit, no time should be lost in pouring down salt and water, if sufficient sensibility remain to allow of swallowing; if not, the head must be sponged with cold water until the sense return, when salt will completely restore the patient from the lethargy.

In a fit, the feet should be placed in warm water, with mustard added; and the legs briskly rubbed, all bandages removed from the neck, and a cool apartment procured, if possible. In many cases of severe bleeding at the lungs, and when other remedies fail, Dr. Rush found two teaspoonfuls of salt completely stayed the blood.

In cases of bite from a mad dog, wash the part with strong brine for an hour, then bind on some salt in a rag.

In toothache, warm salt and water held to the part affected, and renewed two or three times, will relieve in most cases. If the gums be affected, wash the gums with brine; if the teeth be covered with tartar, wash them twice a day with salt and water.

In swelled neck, wash the part with brine, and drink it also twice a day until cured.

Salt will expel worms, if used in the food in a moderate degree and aids digestion; but salt meat is injurious if used much.—Scientific American.

AN AGRICULTURIST has tried with success the following method of making peaches grow without stones: "Turn the tops of the trees down, cut off the ends, stick them into the ground, and fasten so with stakes; in a year or two these tops will take root, and when well rooted cut off the branches connecting these reversed and rooted branches with the tree proper, and these reversed peach trees will produce fine peaches without stones." The same experiment may be tried with plums, cherries, and currants.

[The result, we suspect, would realize more "experiment" than peaches.]

TO FIX PENCIL WRITING.—Pencil writing may be fixed almost indelibly as ink, by passing the moistened tongue over it. Even breathing slowly over the lines after writing, renders them much less liable to erase than when not subjected to that process. This fact may be of importance to persons who may wish to carry a memorandum book for a long time. In ordinary use the pages of such a book often become very much defaced by the erasure and diffusion of the pencil marks over the entire surface of the paper. A trial of the experiment will readily satisfy any person of the utility of the idea.

BAKED CORN PUDDING.—The following is excellent: Scald three pints of milk, into which stir smoothly two cups of corn meal, one cup chopped suet, or half cup butter. When cool add a well rounded cup of good sugar, two beaten eggs, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, one of salt and a pint of milk, mixed with three tablespoonfuls of flour. Add a cup of raisins, and bake two and a half hours.

IF YOU have a screw rusted into wood, or a nut or bolt that will not readily turn, pour on it a little kerosene, and let it remain. In a little while the oil will penetrate the interstices so that the screw can be easily started.

A STRANGE AFFAIR.—The Cuyaxie News gives the particulars of another act in a singular drama that has for some time been in process of enactment at New Baltimore: On the 23d of June a daughter of Mr. Phillip Greene, of that town, was shot and severely wounded by an unknown person. On the 8th of August she was again fired at through a window. The third act now presents itself. On Saturday last Miss Greene was again wounded by a pistol shot. The young girl, who is feeble from the effects of the previous wounds, was at noontime in the garden, when a man presented himself, uttered a threat with the emphasis of an oath, and fired, the ball entering her person. He at once fled. The wound, fortunately, is not dangerous. The case is shrouded in mystery. Some suppose tha the man is known to the girl, but that for some of those strange reasons that at times govern female conduct she will not divulge his name. She, however, has made an affidavit denying all knowledge of the man. The case will not admit the suspicion that might be entertained that it was one of hallucination, or of fiction, for the noise of the pistol has been heard by others, and that veritable wounds have been made at each time. The peculiar circumstances of the case excite universal interest in the locality.

—The Richmond negroes are utterly dismayed at the fate of the suffrage amendment in Ohio, and have commenced to look with suspicion upon their Radical masters. The fact begins to dawn upon them that if the professed friends of the negro in a Northern State will not grant the negroes political rights they would not do so in the Southern States either, except with a design to make a political tool of the black element.

---

—The Mobile Tribune gives a pictorial illustration, entitled "Scene in a Military Mayor's Court," and underneath the picture these words are printed: "Negro policeman holding a white woman, while Radical military Mayor fines her ten dollars for using 'disrespectful language' to a 'man and brother,' in the act of driving a dray over her infant.."

---

—Rev. Thomas H. Jones, of Pembroke, Mass., a negro preacher, has been sentenced to pay a fine for an indecent assault upon a couple of white women. The humorous clergyman appealed and the case will go to the Grand Jury.

OVER ONE MILLION BOTTLES have been sold, and not a single instance of its failure is known. We have in our possession any quantity of Certificates, some of them from EMINENT PHYSICIANS who have used it in their practice, and given the pre-eminence over all other compounds.

IT DOES NOT DRY UP A COUGH,
BUT LOOSENS IT,
so as to enable the patient to expectorate freely. Two or three doses will INVARIABLY CURE TICKLING IN THE THROAT. A half bottle has often completely cured the most Stubborn Cough, and yet, though it is so sure and speedy in its operation, it is perfectly harmless, being purely vegetable. It is very agreeable to the taste, and may be administered to children of any age.

In cases of Croup we will guarantee a cure, if taken in season.

It is within the reach of all, it being the cheapest and best medicine extant.

COE'S DYSPEPSIA CURE!

This great remedy for all DISEASES OF THE STOMACH is the discovery of the inventor of Coe's valuable Cough Balsam, while experimenting for his own health. It cured Cramp in the Stomach for him which had before yielded to nothing but chelotore.

The almost daily testimony from various parts of the country encourage us to believe there is no disease caused by a disordered stomach it will not speedily cure. Physicians endorse and use it. Ministers give testimony of its efficacy; and from all directions we receive tidings of cures performed.

Dyspepsia it is sure to cure. Heartburn one dose will cure. Sick Headache it has cured in hundreds of cases. Headache and Dizziness it stops in thirty minutes. Acidity of the Stomach it corrects at once. Rising of the Food it stops immediately. Distress after Eating one dose will remove. Cholera Morbus rapidly yields to a few doses. Bad Breath will be changed with half a bottle.

IT IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS!

Its unprecedented success is owing to the fact that it cures by assisting Nature to reassert her sway in the system.

Nearly every dealer in the United States sells it at ONE DOLLAR PER BOTTLE.
